Miss Miner Pioneer in Education for Women

"Leader in Their Intellectual and Spirtual Emancipation," Said President King

Miss Luella Miner, who died Monday at Tsinan, was born in Northern Wisconsin, U. S. A., in 1862. Her father was a teacher then among the Chippewa Indians. She was graduated from Oberlin College in the class of 1884 and after teaching in Negro schools in Kentucky and Tennessee, was appointed a missionary by the American Board in 1887 and sent to North China.

After a period of language study at Paotingfu, Miss Miner joined the faculty of the North China College at Tungchou. Here she manifested her notable gifts as a teacher and won the high regard of students and associates. After passing through the siege of Peiping in 1900, she gathered the material which appeared in her books, "Two Heroes of Cathay" and "China's Book of Martyrs."

She took a leading part in the reorganization of Christian educational work in North China, a work that resulted in the establishment of a series of union institutions out of which the Peking Union Medical College and Yenching University have developed. Miss Miner's chief part in the development came in connection with the inauguration of collegiate studies for women in the North China Union Women's College, of which she became the first president.

The college remained for some years closely connected with Bridgman Academy out of which it had grown. In 1915 Miss Miner was able to secure the T'ung Fu palace and the college became entirely independent. After the union of the Methodist Peking University and the North China Union College for Men (from Tungchou) on the K'uei Chia Ch'ang campus in the southeast corner of the north city of Peiping, a further union with the women's college was considered and finally consummated.

In all this planning, Miss Miner had a major share. After the successful inauguration of coeducation, she preferred to turn the deanship over to Mrs. Alice Browne Frame so that she herself might be free to serve the cause of women's education in China by further pioneering at another center. She chose to help at Cheeloo University, Tsinan. She has been teaching in the school of religion there in recent years.

From the beginning of her work with women students, Miss Miner showed the qualities of a great administrator. The influence of her strong personality was deeply felt. In addition to her work in the college, she had a wide influence among educated and influential people throughout Peiping. To the women and children of the city she gave special service in the exciting year of the revolution as head of a relief society which had the backing of philanthropic Chinese.

Throughout her long service in China, she was a careful observer of events and a wise interpreter of them. Her "journal" letters have been widely used by those who have wanted to understand better what was going on in China. The characterization of her by President King of Oberlin in conferring upon her the Litt. D. degree is a most fitting tribute: "a leader in the intellectual and spiritual emancipation of Chinese women."

Expert Architect, Son of Liang Ch'i-ch'ao, To Speak

___L.C.P.

A lecture on Chinese architecture, illustrated with lantern slides, will be given by Mr. Liang Ssuch'eng, son of Mr. Liang Ch'i-ch'ao, next Tuesday, Dec. 10, 7:30 p.m., in McBrier 103, to be held under the auspices of the Harvard-Yenching Institute.

In recent years, Mr. Liang has made several interesting and valuable discoveries of the existing structures built in the styles of early dynasties, and through his careful study he has analysed minutely the distinctive features of architectural styles of different periods in Chinese culture.

Mr. Liang is at present a special research student of the National Chinese Architectural Association, and his brother, Mr. Liang Ssu-yung, formerly a student under the Harvard-Yenching Institute in archaeology, is now in charge of the Anyang excavations of the Academia Sinica.

Kelly Kue's "Inspiration" Dinner Prepares Junior B For Championship Cage Game

As a token of appreciation of the Junior B basketball victory over the Freshman A team recently, Kelly Kuo Chia-li, popular Junior athletics chairman, gave a "pow wow" dinner to twelve members of the squad at the Warner gymnasium last night. Kitty Chen, "go getting" Junior coed, was the sole Junior coed representative at the feast.

By virtue of its recent victory, the Junior B team will play the Faculty quintet for the championship of the Intramural League. The Juniors who are doped as the "underdogs" for this tussle, are practicing earnestly. A practice game with a Marine company team will probably be played this coming Wednesday afternoon at Warner's gym at 4:30.

The Juniors are out for a banner year and under the efficient leadership of Kelly Kuo, it is not for from achieving its goal. By defeating the Freshman football team 2-1 last Monday, the Juniors are champions of the interclass league.

Bach's B Minor Mass At Gamble

This evening at eight o'elock the usual victrola concert will be held in Gamble Hall. The programme will feature selections from Bach's B minor Mass.

Goal of $1850 Set For Community Chest Drive

Ten-Day Campaign To Start Monday; Committee Considers Requests Of Six Organizations

A ten-day fund-collecting campaign within the Yenching community will be started from next Monday, Dec. 9, according to a measure passed at the committee meeting of the Community Chest, held late yesterday afternoon at the President's House. The campaign will be formally closed on the 19th.

Application letters submitted from various associations revealed that the requests amounted to $1850, the same as last year's. The amount is divided amoung the Chingho Rural Health station, $400; Yenta Relief Federation, $350; Students' Self Help, $200; Yenta Christian Fellowship, $500; and the Yenta Craftwork Medical, $400. The Students' Emergency Medical and Chengfu Sanitary to date, have not made any request at all.

In view of the difficulty of the present situation and the flood relief, the Chest has tentatively decided to strive to raise money to the requested amount as a goal. "We want to be more realistic and systematic." said the chairman, Mr. H.S. Liang. "In case we cannot secure the desired amount, we shall try to devise other practical methods."

Mrs. Vernon Nash was officially elected secretary for the year 1935-36, her predecessor, Miss Hilda. L. Hague, retiring from the post. Treasurer will still be Mr. G.R. Loehr. Last year Mr. Loehr has worked so well that the Chest received actually more money than the amount pledged.

New committee members include Mrs. J. B. Taylor, and Mr. C.P. Ts'ao. The Chest will hold meetings on the 12th, 4:00 p.m. at the President's House.

The Annotator

Attempts to improve upon Sandburg have stirred interest mildly comparable to the expressed desires to alter the library motto. E. & E. pooled ideas and produced the suggestion: life is a synthesis of hard-tack and hollyhocks.

Why Not a Yenching "Box Day"?

At regular intervals, one notes a wishful longing that we could secure some method of getting folks to return what they have borrowed. It is of course possible to get up the strength of mind to ask for something if you've kept a record or can recall who has it. If not, what to do?

One of the E's mentioned above thinks that persons get to the point where they have had something so long they are ashamed to return it. She proposes that we follow the idea outlined in an Atlantic "Contributors' Column" a number of years ago. Each person hopefully put a barrel outside his door on a given day into which articles could secretly be placed. That might be an appropriate variation of the way the British celebrate the day after Christmas.

Two Fatal Weaknesses in Scheme

"Barrel Day" would work only if everyone could be persuaded to give their households a thorough inspection to find objects not belonging to them. Then, what should one do on discovery of something untagged of whose ownership you are unaware? Answer is: one should use our classified columns.

Better still, perhaps, is this plan: now that we have an open center in the salesroom of the Yenching Craftwork, let's ask the ladies to provide a table on which small objects could be placed for identification whose ownership was unknown. The service could be made to pay for itself if the Mothers' Club scheme were also adopted of accepting small saleable used things for community inspection, the Craftwork to receive 10 per cent of the sales price for overhead services.

We Solicit Your Bright Ideas

The application of just a little thinking ought to supply much lubrication for communal living, if we would only pool the ideas. Another example: the power house could make money, we feel sure, with a small ice-maker whereby we could buy pure cubes for iced drinks of all kinds in the hot months. Seems an odd time to bring that up but, a la the Arkansas roof, it will have to be planned for now if we are to have this desirable service by next summer.

THE BOOK END

IN ALL COUNTRIES

by John dos Passos

First published in 1934, and recently acquired by the Yenching library, this is a collection of articles which have previously appeared in newspapers and magazines, and are now gathered together between the covers of a book. The whole effect is necessarily fragmentary. In content the book is for the most part a grim picture of political confusion and injustice prevailing in modern Russia, Mexico, Spain and the United States. The Russian picture, portrayed in a series of short travel sketches, is vivid and impressionistic, without attempting to probe underlying forces. Like a modern tourist one is rushed from scene to scene, and while still vainly endeavoring to get a grip on the situation, is ejected over the border.

The Spanish and Mexican articles deal with revolutionary activities and heroes; the former a somewhat ambitious though rapid survey of the political events leading up to and culminating in the shootings in the ill-fated village of Casas Viejas in 1933; and, the latter full of colour and sharp outline, the story romantic. The American picture records the seamy side of politics and the effects of unemployment, and ranges from the communist agitations in 1925 to scenes in the White House in 1934.

The style of the book is modern, vigorous and creative. It is often frankly journalistic. Subscribers to Time will find much that is familiar, especially in such passages as that depicting King Alphonso's departure from the scene of his kingly labors. The author is, however, consciously attempting something new. To this end he coins words and phrases freely, makes constant use of slang, and has developed a method of running together as one word, phrases, and nouns with their adjectives. To one unfamiliar with such tactics the effect is annoying, at first because so many combinations of words are treated in this way, and then, because so many are not. For instance, one comes suddenly upon "garbagecans", hesitates, then reaches for the dictionary while "crustaceans" or "herbaceous" hover in mind as having some possible connection; then, as suddenly the word disentangles itself-"garbage cans". The book contains grim humor, satire and imagery, and here and there passages of much beauty. The author knows his business. After experiments in sentence structure and work formation which consciously create an impression of haste and confusion, there is an unexpected paragraph of short, clear sentences, the tempo is unhurried, the wording simple and sincere. He is describing twilight and a river, and the language perfectly fits the scene.

If for no other purpose, the book is worth reading as an indication of the direction in which modern English is leading us. I would, however, caution those who are still struggling to master the English language against taking the book too seriously, and above all against attempting to use a dictionary. It is doubtful whether many of the following list of words appearing on page 185-"wops, bohunks, polacks, hunkies, dagoes, furriners"-could be dug out of any self-respecting dictionary. ——D. А.

Hildabrands From Manila Send Season's Greetings to Friends

Miss Wagner recently received a long letter from Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hildabrand, which she will be glad to share with interested friends. It is a characteristically vivid account of their six-months' vacation trip home last year through Europe and America, and of their life in the Philippines, Mr. Hildabrand, who was for some time a member of the Yenching staff in charge of engineering equipment, is now connected with the Manila municipal power company.

The chief feature of his letter is his description of a typhoon last year in which it rained 59 inches within forty-eight hours. The resulting flood almost cost him his life and put the hydo-electric station of which he is in charge 80 miles from Manila out of commission for three months. Mr. and Mrs. Hildabrand send Christmas greetings to all friends here and urge any who may pass through the Islands to get in touch with them, P. O. Box 2560, Manila.
